

Advances in Polar Upper Atmosphere Research
NOTE TO CONTRIBUTORS

General

Advances in Polar Upper Atmosphere Research is an annual publication from National Institute of Polar Research (NIPR) including contributed papers on the upper atmosphere physics in the polar regions as well as papers presented at the NIPR Symposium on Coordinated Observations of the Ionosphere and the Magnetosphere in the Polar Regions. Advances in Polar Upper Atmosphere Research accepts these categories of papers; scientific papers, research notes, review papers and reports. Scientific papers are original articles dealing with major problems related to the polar upper atmosphere physics. Research notes are short articles dealing with a significant topic, new findings, and preliminary interpretation, etc. Both papers are reviewed by at least two referees for evaluating the acceptability. Review papers deal with overview of researches on specific issues. Reports include scientific and technical information on the activities related to polar upper atmosphere research. These papers are reviewed by at least one referee.
